FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

The managers continued to take profits from Financials and sold the Russian equity and European Health Care positions. Asian and European equities were reduced due to concerns around slowing growth in China and rising energy costs. Instead, the managers added to a global dividend strategy that provides exposure to high quality assets at attractive valuations and purchased a sustainable US equity income strategy. They also increased US and European equity hedges. Elsewhere, the Japanese Yen position was reduced following its strong performance and a long-dated US Treasury position was sold. The allocation to hybrid bonds was reduced while that to emerging market local currency debt was increased given attractive valuations and cheap currencies. They also purchased an energy infrastructure strategy that focuses on the transition to a lower carbon economy.
