FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

The managers still believe that the full impact of higher rates is yet to be felt. Tighter credit conditions will weigh on fundamentals and it is prudent to adopt a defensive approach to asset allocation. They remain underweight in credit and equities, given the economic headwinds and the fact that valuations do not represent attractive risk-reward at the moment. In defensive assets, the managers added to 10-year US Treasuries. They also added to the Japanese yen exposure as they anticipate further supportive measures that could lead to yield curve control policy normalisation. Within yield assets, they reduced exposure to emerging market hard currency debt. Within equities, they trimmed exposure to China value equities and sold the remaining small position in ASEAN equities.
